An amusing story is told of a young Washington bride of recent date, a most fin de siecie and up-to-jate young woman, to has pever done much of anything in play tennis, golf, and practice all kinds of "manly sports," and who was invited a few days after her marriage to the home of an aunt of her husband, a conservative old indy who had no patience whatever with the "new woman" and her ideals
As the aunt came forward to receive her new niece, dignified and severe in her atiff black slik, releved by a point lace color, the young bride felt cold schills creoping over her. "My dear," she said, "after a few com-'monplaces had been exchanged, "won't you monpaces had been exchanged, won tyou sing to me before dinner?"

"I don't sing, Aunt Blank."

"Well, then, play something; that will do as well."

"I don't play at all," said the trembling

Voice of the bride.

"Don't play or sing?" and the gold lorgaeties dropped from the eyes of the astonished lidy. "But," she said in a few moments when she had sufficiently recovered, "of course, you embroider beautifully. You must show me some of your work."

Fortunately Sor the young matron, din-ner was announced at that moment and she was spared further humiliating confessions.

The engagement of Miss Helen Steele of this city to Mr. Edward E. Gwynne of New York, which has just been announced, occasioned no surprise to the friends of the young couple in this city. Miss Steele is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Steele, who reside at No. 1326 Eighteenth street, and is one of the most beautiful and charming girls in Washington society. She is a tall and graceful blonde, with a bright, attractive manner, and is very popular with the young set.

Mr. Gwynne, a nephew of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, has been devoted to Miss Steele ever since her debut last year. He is only twenty-one, tall and good-looking, with a penchant for fine horseflesh and possesses any number of smart traps and thoroughbred horses. The engagement of Miss Helen Steele of

PILOT WALTER DEAD.

Remarkable Career of an Old and Capt. Samuel P. Walter, an old government pilot, died at his home. No. 1236 Sixth street southwest, at 4 o'clock this norming. He leaves a widow and three daughters.

Capt. Walter has been an unusually healthy man. He was taken sick about three weeks ago with gastric fever. Dr. Hammett was called in, but in spite of every medical appliance, the patient grew wors until death ensued.

Capt. Walter was a government pilot during the war under his father, Robert Walter, who was chief pilot of the Potomac flotilla. He was entrusted with several difficult tasks in those trying days, and had a fund of anecdotes regarding them. He was captain of the quarantize boat at Fortrees Monroe toward the close of the war, and later of several other government steamers. His last assignment in the service was as mate of the River Queen of the Mount Vernon Company.

vice was as mate of the River Queen of the Mount Vernon Company.

He had several brothers also, who were pilots, and he was the last living member of the family. He was a member of Burnside Post, G. A. R., of the American Association of Masters and Pilots, Harbor 31, and of Jasper Council, Independent Order of American Mechanics. He had lived nearly all the sixty years of his life here in Washington, and leaves a host of friends. His funeral will take place on Sunday after. His funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon, and the interment will be in the Con-gressional Cemetery.
